High student intake at Malmo

A NEW academic year commenced at the World Maritime University in Malmo on 20 March. The student population now stands at 204, which is described as a full complement.

Secretary general of the IMO, Mr Srivastava, who is also Chancellor of the University, stated that since the facility was founded in 1983, a total of 600 students from over 100 countries had been admitted. High level two year MSc courses are offered.

Course subjects include maritime safety administration and the technical management of shipping companies.
