COLOURFUL FIRST UN GRADUATION

Malmo: On Tuesday the first batch of students at the World Maritime University graduated after having gone through the two-year-long unique training.

Many prominent guests and visitors dressed in elegant national costumes made the solemn ceremony at the Town Hall very colourful.

As this educational project has comprised students from all corners of the world, the international feature among the visitors was remarkably great.

Before the students were given their diplomas, the Rector of the university, Sheldon Kinney, held a speech that was much appreciated. He stressed that he was very satisfied with the development of the WMU during the two years it had existed. Furthermore he hoped that the first batch of students should spread the knowledge they had acquired at the university in their home countries.
